As this was to be Col. Roosevelt's opening speech in the State campaign.

The Atherton of the league is the best, that could be passed. Secretary D. B. Atherton of the league made an extra effort to increase the size of the Colonel's audience by calling from the stage up to the Seventy-first Regiment band in the gallery to hurry outside and play some national tunes as the hour approached for the Colonel to arrive.

The band music helped almost immediately to swell the audience, so that by the time Col. Roosevelt was ready to address the assemblage about half of the orchestra seats were occupied and only four-fifths of the sixty-five boxes were empty. As Col. Roosevelt reached the building Delegate John G. Capers of South Carelland and Capers of South Caper
